ers, stereotypers, waiters in all-night restaurants, telegraph and telephone operators, clerks, drivers from the post-office across the way, and many others. There was a sprinkling of women, and just before Mr. Bryan arrived, quite a delegation of all-nighters arrived from further up town.

Other Speakers Heard. The Twenty-third Regiment Band furnished the music. Captain McNally, with sixty policemen, kept the crowd in order. E.ectric lights threw a light over the whole crowd.

The hour before Mr. Bryan's arrival The hour before Mr. Bryan's arrival was filled in by former Mayor Dunne, of Chicago; Jacob E. Bersch, of the coroner's office; National Committeeman Brown, of Vermont; John Mullaly, Col. John J. Martin, former speaker of the Missouri house, and others.

Mr. Bryan arrived at the Broadway side in an automobile accompanied by Mrs. Bryan, Democratic National Chairman Norman E. Mack and Mrs. Mack, and Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia.

Georgia.

It was 3 o'clock to the minute when the police escort forced a way through the throng to the city hall steps for the Democratic candidate and his party. The band played and the applause was prolonged for several minutes, while scores waved flags and banners. The crewd almost doubled after Mr. Bryan came into view and kept increasing as long as he spoke.

Fresh and Smiling.

Although he had been going almost incessantly for twenty-two hours, as he told his audience, he appeared fresh and smiling, and his voice was strong, vigorous, and penetrating. Almost his first words won over the crowd, if words were necessary. He said:

"There is no badge of shame on the man who works with brain or brawn, but the time is coming when there will be on the man was spends his time in of on the man who spends his time in idleness on money earned by the labor of others." His talk was largely along labor lines, and a repetition of much he has said in other speeches during the campaign. The crowd was thoroughly in sympathy with him, indiging from its lusty appliance, and every point went straight home.

Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Mack, and several other ladies stood back in the door of the ladies stood back in the door of Mrs. Bryan, Mrs. Mack, and several other ladies stood back in the door of the city hall, and frequently joined in the appliause and waved the small flags they carried.

Full of Confidence.

Mr. Bryan talked thirty-five minutes in the seemed bubbling over with good humor and confidence, and said the only gloom that ne had met during his tours affected him so he was able to make but twenty-five speeches that day, which raised a big laugh.

At the conclusion of his address, the police reserves forced an opening through the city hall basement and out through the city hall basement and out through the city hall basement and to their waiting automobiles.

"I am very pleased—and very tired," was Mr. Bryan's only comment on his day of remarkable activity, as he was whisked away to get a little needed rest.

Taff began to come last night, and were still pouring in this afternoon.

While Bryan and Taft are, of course, both far ahead of the other candidates, now end then a ballot for the Prohib tion or Socialist leader comes wanders, to join the throng of ballots that are piled upon the desk of the "Election Editor."
